TRANFORMATION

2023-2024 Season

pangeaworldtheater.org
Pangea World Theater was founded with the intention of countering mainstream theater practices that are shaped by and center white supremacy, colonialism and capitalism. Pangea believes that we live in a pluriverse, a circle of many realities that are sacred and true. Our reality is made up not only of different cultures, but different ways of being and ways of knowing. The human world is a part of the natural world and the spiritual world, not separate and apart. We tend these many realities through producing and presenting theater performances and arts-based community engagement that values and honors the traditions, stories, aesthetics, and leadership of Indigenous, Immigrant, Black and Brown artists. Pangea welcomes all people working to create a more just and loving world to join our circle.

In addition to our original artistic creations, productions and presentations — Pangea’s programs transcend borders and bring diverse audiences together at the intersection of art and social justice.
Indigenous Voices

Created in 2001 to highlight the diverse, contemporary work of Indigenous theater and performance artists, Indigenous Voices continues to bring local, national, and international Indigenous artists to audiences in the Twin Cities.

National Institute for Directing & Ensemble Creation

Committed to supporting professional development, exchange and mentorship among artists of color, LGBTQ2+, and women directors, this collaboration between Pangea World Theater and Art2Action, Inc., NIDEC provides a unique experience for theater artists to collaborate and share methodologies of directing and ensemble creation with special emphasis on non-Western techniques and equity.

Race: North and South of the Great River

This is a multi-year program in collaboration with the Mississippi Center for Cultural Production to explore how race and equity manifest north and south of the Mississippi River System in this country and also in the global south. It is an intergenerational program that consists of performances, story circles, digital storytelling, visual arts, and dialogues.

Lake Street Arts!

Deepening the practice of placekeeping our LSA! program engages with the communities we arise from offering workshops, public art projects and performances as tools to continue to create, heal and work towards the city and the world we want, we need, we deserve. A world that honors human dignity, animals, plants, water and the sacred under our feet. LSA! includes the new Seeding Change Institute, a yearly cohort where artistic community is nurtured and participants are supported and challenged to grow in their artistic practice. Look for more info soon about applying for the 2024 cohort.
This season we turn to the idea of tending.

Tending comes from the Latin word tendere which means to extend oneself for another purpose. We as a community have seen the power of tending to each other as we face pandemic, uprisings, and more. It becomes clearer that the more we give to each other, the more we all have to share. For that reason, tending is the theme of our 2023-2024 Season. Join Pangea World Theater this year as we tend transformation together.
